Illinois State Archives' Physicians Database is now available online

The Illinois State Archives is pleased to announce that a joint Archives/Illinois State Genealogical Society (ISGS) project to create an online database for Physicians Registers is up and running. The new genealogical resource site can be found on the State Archives website under “Databases” or by going directly to: https://www.cyberdriveillinois.com/departments/archives/databases/physearch.html.

The Illinois State Archives’ Physicians Database is an index containing the names of more than 62,700 physicians and surgeons who registered for licensure with the Illinois State Board of Health and the Illinois Department of Professional Regulation. The database spans from 1877 to 1937.

The types of information one can find on the database relate to the healthcare industry. Thanks to the hard work of the Department of Information Technology of the Illinois Secretary of State’s office, each name on the database is directly linked to the scanned image found in the register. This means that researchers can look directly at the record.
